Nicki Quinn For President

From the desk of Jonah, Presidential spouse

As Anika's spouse I want to focus on training, aiding, and arming teachers in case of an accident like a shooting. In the past when there has been a shooting at a school someone or some group steps out and brings up the topic of arming teachers. I want this topic to be answered and solved. This topic can have an easy answer for some people and others it causes tension.

What I would like to do is require all teachers, including current and future/in training teachers, to go through a class on safety, defense, first aid, ect. This class will be provided by the state and will be regularly taught to keep the teachers remembering it. It will go over basics and then another non-mandatory class for more in depth training.

The state which the teacher is in will be able to choice if they want to arm their teachers. Arming the teachers will require a rigurios test including; a background check, weapon safety test and a mental and drug test on a regularly scheduled that they will not know when. The state will only be allowed one weapon, a small pistol, for every eight teacher that are on campus. The teacher whom receives the pistol will not be allowed to carry it on them or take it home. If the teacher does no want the gun but can have one is not required to possess the gun.

Besides arming the teachers they will have to take a mandatory defense class. This class will include tactics that may aid in protecting the students. This will be good because it will allow the teachers to help if things go wrong like a shooting, or attack. This plan will cost around $102,000,000, that is around 2 million per state.
